Chaplain Griffe, who holds the rank of major, and whose efforts are mainly responsible for the auditorium, said, as he was geiting ready to move with his regiment to some station in the central department, that the building has been well worth the toil it took to erect it, with nothing but nerve, hig hearted Et Paso friends and soldier labor to accomplish the work. He said he never has been in a place where the generality and large mindesiress of the people was so apparent as here.

Griffes is Presbyterian.

About 10,000 men have been scated inside the auditorium since its completion to see moving pictures and hear soloe by El Paso singers, as well as joining in gospet hymns and listening to the scenel according to the Presbyterian decitine, of which church chaptain Griffes is a dector of divinity. He has more often used the outdoors to reach the men of the samy than the inside of a building in his 15 years service with the colors.

The Seventh's auditorium is a well constructed building, with wooden floor, uncontructed by pillars, the roof being self supporting and inside it are painting, flowers and curtains on the windows making it one of the men at the tractive meeting piaces in the army rantonneals on the border.
